A NEW JOURNEY AWAITS

Over the last year, we have been inspired by the enchanting jewel tones of paintings, embroidery, textiles and art of the Qing dynasty, which spanned 1644 - 1912. It was an era that celebrated the arts, with emperors, nobility, and scholars embracing the poetry, calligraphy and visual arts.

The below Village series of pillows was inspired by the paintings of Shen Yinghui in the series Pavilion in Autumn Woods. This stunning tableau displays a lively village at peace. Note how the artist uses specific yet subtle coloring and exuberant brushstroke technique to evoke a brilliant range of emotional tones. Using graphical applications, we increased the exposure and lightened the colors to provide more definition to the landscape and found a dreamy foggy hue to capture a serene scape.

These pillows are made of our supremely silky soft satin fabric. Art works are printed on the front and back, knife edge finished and have an invisible zipper for access. Pillows are stuffed with a down and feather insert.

In the next design, blues, greens, and teals capture the lushness of a forest. A painting by Gao Jian (1634-1707) of the Qing dynasty created River Village in Early Summer rendered in a hanging scroll. Playing with colors and saturations, we rendered our version of our jewel mountain highlighting the hues in a magical tableau. The result is a crispness of morning fog on a breathtaking landscape.

Each pillow has a knife edge finish, and an invisible zipper located at the bottom. Inserts are stuffed with feather and down.

A gathering of vigorous deer seek nourishment. Suddenly, mealtime is interrupted by an unseen presence. Contrasting hues of orange and green evoke a sense of heightened alert amid calm. The work of Gu Quan in Bleating Deer takes us to a magenta forest of maple trees with deer grazing in the distance.

Consider the following. Originally an embroidery, these mystical creatures were conjured to protect one against harmful spiritual elements. Our Golden Lions pose spiritedly on a backdrop of navy blue. These are made of a supremely soft velveteen chenille and measure 22"x22". Artwork is printed on the front and back.
