Hinkley Moving to New Showroom Set to Debut at High Point Market

Over 15,000 Square Feet of Elegant Lighting Inspiration at the Heart of Market Square

Avon Lake, Ohio – Hinkley, leading designer of decorative lighting and ceiling fans, is set to unveil its new showroom location in High Point, North Carolina, opening on April 13th. Visitors are invited to explore over 15,000 square feet of indoor/outdoor space, immerse themselves in elegant lighting displays, and peruse Hinkley's complete Interior, Bath, Outdoor, Landscape, and Ceiling Fan collections – including exciting new styles making their debut during this Spring's Market.

Located on the ground level of the legendary Historic Market Square building (#143), Hinkley's new showroom embraces the structure's incredible character and history. Authentic rustic wood floors and charming original brick walls create a chic, modern industrial interior that celebrates the unique charm of its urban surroundings. Both indoor and outdoor areas, enhanced by Hinkley's expertly crafted lighting designs, offer visitors space to meet and socialize as they explore over 850 products spanning the Hinkley, Fredrick Ramond, and Lark brands.

“Over the past three years, Hinkley worked to expand our brand presence to the trade. It is an honor to be doubling our showroom footprint within the legendary Market Square building,” said Hinkley President Jess Wiedemer. “We're proud to continue fostering our commitment to innovation, growth, and thoughtful design in designer lighting and ceiling fans.”

The new Hinkley High Point Showroom is located on the first floor of the Historic Market Square Building (MS143), just steps away from High Point Market registration, closest to the Number 29 stop on the Red Line.
