

Lamp Shade Collection

Textiles are one of the simplest ways to change the atmosphere of a room – slipcovers, throw pillows or lamp shades allow a chance to add color, texture and charm without overhauling the entire room. For anyone who is timid about color, adding a patterned or striped fabric lamp shade is an excellent way to experiment without overwhelming those who live and work in a space.

Last year Currey & Company introduced lamp shades in two sizes and two styles in 14 fabrics. Partnering with Lacefield Designs, the collection consists of two types of shades in each category: pleated/tapered and drum shape with trim on the top and bottom. The full-sized shades work with both table and floor lamps. All are 100% cotton and are printed and assembled domestically. This is a freestanding program, which means customers may purchase the shades and use them how they like. Creative Director Cecil Adams shares: “Lacefield Designs can easily customize fabrics for us because they are digitally printed, which means the company's wide array of patterns and colors can be bumped up or toned down.” As color preferences change so will the collection to meet the expectations of the interior design community. The shade collection offers a bespoke style at an attractive price.
