

From Morocco, by Hand

Ceramics and craft at Collected by Schwung

Sculptural ceramics lead an exploration of Moroccan craft, where vessels, woven pieces, and leather seating introduce material depth and the presence of the maker.

Sculptural ceramics from the Moroccan collection.

From Morocco, by Hand

HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA / FALL 2026

A vessel can begin with a practical purpose and become the focus of a room. In the Moroccan collection at Collected by Schwung, ceramics invite that shift in attention through sculptural profiles, textured surfaces, and the relationship between clay and glaze.

For visitors to Fall High Point Market, the collection offers an opportunity to consider the place of craft within contemporary interiors. Its Moroccan offering includes hand-glazed bowls, expressive vases, and decorative platters, alongside woven pendants and leather seating. Together, they reveal several ways in which material and technique can shape an object's character.

The ceramics are particularly expressive in their use of form. Rounded projections interrupt simple silhouettes; elongated necks and generous bodies create changing proportions. Some pieces lend themselves to flowers or branches, while others can be considered as sculptural objects in their own right.

Collected by Schwung places these works alongside antiques and furniture from other traditions. A ceramic vessel against an aged wooden surface allows both materials to become more visible. Repeated forms can establish rhythm across a shelf or table, while a single larger piece can give definition to an otherwise quiet corner.

For designers, the collection offers opportunities to work with texture and volume as carefully as with color. Its appeal lies in the experience of the objects at close range: their contours, surfaces, and the work involved in bringing them into being.

Visitors can explore the Moroccan collection within the wider world of Collected by Schwung during Fall High Point Market 2026.

Visit Collected by Schwung during Fall High Point Market 2026.

313.Space · 313 South Centennial Street · High Point, NC 27260